

Tactical Data Link

The tactical data link is indispensable to any modern army. Capillary, the integrated tactical data link solution, supports secure communication between individual units up to an entire deployed force. The key to success in the battlefield is to reach the real-time and precise information. The ability to reliably communicate this information between platforms and domains (air, sea and land) is critical by means of enhancing battlefield awareness while ensuring the accuracy, integrity and security of the information.